The future of road network operation

- The road network operation cannot be considered today as a service limited to road traffic.
- Strategies for road network operation have to consider the overall mobility of transports and goods and the various modes.
- Co-operation between stakeholders has to be developed in order to propose to governments an overall approach.
- Co-operation includes exchange of information with various sources in order that travellers can access to coherent data allowing them to make their choice.
- Focus on user/customer needs
- Different operators should cooperate for daily operation to be able to implement their own strategies in a coherent manner.
